

TRIPLETS IN HOSPITAL DOING NICELY, THANKS

Parents, Dubious First About High Cost of Shoes, Now Prouder Than Ever

"Dad," thinking of the high cost of babies' shoes, looked rather dubious, and "mother" wasn't certain just how she felt about the future, when the triplets first came to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Heaton two weeks ago. But now that the three little nites are growing into splendid, healthy babies at the Hahnemann Hospital there aren't prouder parents in the city than the P. R. T. conductor and his wife.

Two tiny black-haired infants whose baskets in the hospital ward are labeled "Margaret, four pounds six ounces," and "Adelaide, five pounds nine and a half ounces," look as like as two peas. They even wrinkle their noses the same way when they cry and curl their fingers just so when someone touches the little hands. But Harry, Jr., is a blond, weighing four pounds and six and three-quarter ounces, who looks most solemnly out upon the world, as one of the nurses explained it.

"He came into the world like a perfect gentleman, following the ladies, but he certainly believes in making himself heard now that he is here."

These are the first triplets ever born at Hahnemann. The hospital folk are preparing a cunning lot of clothing and an attractive crib for them.

"It is quite a family all at once," said the mother, smiling as she held one of the babies today. "But I think we can manage. And it will be nice to have them grow up together."

Peirce School Honors Service Men

An address was delivered by City Statistician E. J. Cattell and there was a musical entertainment.
